

Twitter Thread by FINANCIAL IMAGINEER | MATT

FINANCIAL IMAGINEER | MATT

@FI_imagineer

As a parent, your priority number one is to raise independent adults. Period.

Now:

How about raising "financially independent adults"?

Read on to learn 10 lessons about how you can raise financially independent children:

//thread//

1. Let them get a bad grade

Is getting a bad grade a good or a bad thing? Is losing money at the stock market a bad thing? It depends on what you learn from these lessons!

“When you fail, learn from it. There’s nothing wrong with trying again.”

2. Let them forget their homework, their stuff for gym class, their snack box

The more we help, the more we actually teach them that they can’t manage without parental supervision. This is not encouraging. Hands off from now on!

