Twitter Thread by Anosognosiogenesis

Anosognosiogenesis
@pookleblinky

"Only true patriots are willing to commit treason and attempt to secede. You're the one's committing treason and seceding, not us."

This is now turning into a mainstream GOP platform.

"you're the one committing sedition. We are upholding the constitution by violating it."

Given how every single GOP position is doublethink, I propose that all their positions be given in the form of both competing beliefs.

Reporting on a republican saying X? You have to report on him also vehemently rejecting X.

No separating these contradictions into separate articles.

"He said X. He also denied X."

"He said his opponent was doing Y. He also stated his willingness to do Y."

Make that contradictory clusterfuck of an ideology as plain as possible, every chance you get.

Do not help them give the illusion of having a coherent ideology or position.

Find one who says he's ready to secede?

Find another, which you will, who claims that it's the federal government that's actually seceding from him.

The entire party is an infighting clusterfuck of thesis and antithesis and none of them could find a synthesis located inside their asshole with both hands

"We will secede from the people who are trying to secede by saying we are not allowed to secede."

Either make it obvious they are incoherent or get another fucking job.