Twitter Thread by Leonydus Johnson

Leonydus Johnson
@LeonydusJohnson

People are mad because I refused to give Biden credit for his empty platitudes. I don't care. Obama got elected and got away with everything because he was eloquent and said things that sounded good even though he did the opposite.

I'm tired of the weight given to superficiality

You cannot possibly promote the idea that America is a fundamentally racist country while ignoring the violence and destruction that is happening as a result of that falsehood as well as the extreme radicalism taking over your own party and also believe "we need to come together"

These things are diametrically opposed. It is like beating your wife and everyone knows you beat your wife and then you come out and start talking about how we need to do something about domestic violence. The sentiment is correct. But you, yourself, are a hypocritical liar.

Paying lip service to something that needs to happen while actively working against it happening is why I am not applauding him. He is acting like a snake. Trying to say "the right things" so we don't see what he's actually doing.

So be mad if you want. I award him no points.