Twitter Thread by Ross T.

Ross T.
@person202227

Remember to #VOTE if you can. Also regardless of what the major parties say, you don't have to #VoteRed or #VoteBlue, by all means do if you want to but this thread is for those who are looking for other, possibly better options depending on their views. Before
I list the 3rd party/nonpartisan candidates please check your state rules to see if their either on the ballot or an informed write in (#VoteResponsibly by checking their campaign site or tweeting them directly so they can tell you is the best bet rather than asking a random person)

That

way you can make sure it counts and tell the poll workers it does count. & make sure you know whether you have to add their Vice Presidents name or not (it may be a state or county rule idk which so research that) Also just because I mention or @ a candidate doesn't necessarily mean I support them or their party. I just want 3rd party/nonpartisan candidates to get more well known as potential candidates & Everyone including the candidates themselves feel free to add more candidates & their planks I wasn't aware of & planks of the candidates I do mention but don't know their planks/aren't mentioned in picture/are so many of I couldn't tell what their main ones were.

The third party/independent/nonpartisan candidates I know are running are the following:

Brian Carroll (@BrianCarrollASP) of the American Solidarity Party (@AmSolidarity)
Campaign site: https://t.co/I9KOMf5DIn

Party's website: https://t.co/JcsVB3bc1R