BREAKING: For the fourth time this week, the Supreme Court has voted 6-3 to clear the way for a last-minute federal execution before Trump leaves office. Justices Breyer and Sotomayor write dissents. Justice Kagan also notes her dissent.

BREYER, J., dissenting

SUPREME COURT OF THE UNITED STATES

No. 20–927 (20A134)

UNITED STATES v. DUSTIN JOHN HIGGSON PETITION FOR WRIT OF CERTIORARI BEFORE JUDGMENT
TO THE UNITED STATES COURT OF APPEALS FOR THE FOURTH
CIRCUIT AND APPLICATION TO VACATE STAY

[January 15, 2021]

The petition for writ of certiorari before judgment to the United States Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit is granted. The December 29, 2020 order of the United States District Court for the District of Maryland is reversed, and the case is remanded to the Court of Appeals with instructions to remand to the District Court for the prompt designation of Indiana under 18 U. S. C. §3596(a).

The application to vacate stay presented to THE CHIEF JUSTICE and by him referred to the Court is granted. The January 13, 2021 order of the Court of Appeals granting a stay is vacated.

JUSTICE KAGAN would deny the petition for writ of certiorari before judgment and the application.

JUSTICE BREYER, dissenting.

Last July the Federal Government executed Daniel Lee. Lee’s execution was the first federal execution in seventeen years. The Government’s execution of Dustin Higgs tonight will be its thirteenth in six months. I wrote in July that “the resumption of federal executions promises to provide examples that illustrate the difficulties of administering the death penalty consistent with the Constitution.” Barr v. Lee, 591 U. S. ___, ___ (2020) (dissenting opinion) (slip op., at 2). The cases that have come before us provide sev-

Dustin Higgs has COVID-19 and will be executed tonight despite lung damage that could turn his lethal injection into an egregiously painful death.

Here is Justice Sotomayor's closing.

There is no matter as “grave as the determination of whether a human life should be taken or spared.” Gregg v. Georgia, 428 U. S. 153, 189 (1976) (opinion of Stewart, Powell, and Stevens, JJ.). That decision is not something to be rushed or taken lightly; there can be no “justice on the fly” in matters of life and death. See Nken v. Holder, 556 U. S. 418, 427 (2009). Yet the Court has allowed the United States to execute thirteen people in six months under a statutory scheme and regulatory protocol that have received inadequate scrutiny, without resolving the serious claims the condemned individuals raised. Those whom the Government executed during this endeavor deserved more from this Court. I respectfully dissent.

Here is Breyer on the SCOTUS majority's rush to execute

None of these legal questions is frivolous. What are courts to do when faced with legal questions of this kind? Are they simply to ignore them? Or are they, as in this case, to “hurry up, hurry up”? That is no solution. Higgs’ case illustrates this dilemma. The District Court ruled against the Government and the Government appealed. The Fourth Circuit denied the Government’s request to dispense with oral argument “in light of the novel legal issues presented” and set oral argument for January 27. App. to Pet. for Cert. 29a. The Circuit then stayed the execution pending further order. Order in No. 20–18 (Jan. 13, 2021). The Government now seeks certiorari before judgment, an extraordinary remedy that is to be granted only upon a showing that “the case is of such imperative public importance as to justify deviation from normal appellate practice.” This Court’s Rule 11. Given the finality and severity of a death sentence, it is particularly important that judges consider and resolve challenges to an inmate’s conviction and sentence. How just is a legal system that would execute an individual without consideration of a novel or significant legal question that he has raised?

Sotomayor names the federal inmates who have been killed since Trump revived the federal death penalty—a punishment that Biden will put a moratorium on next week

SOTOMAYOR, J., dissenting

SUPREME COURT OF THE UNITED STATES

No. 20–927 (20A134)

UNITED STATES v. DUSTIN JOHN HIGGS

ON PETITION FOR WRIT OF CERTIORARI BEFORE JUDGMENT
TO THE UNITED STATES COURT OF APPEALS FOR THE FOURTH
CIRCUIT AND APPLICATION TO VACATE STAY

[January 15, 2021]

JUSTICE SOTOMAYOR, dissenting.

After seventeen years without a single federal execution, the Government has executed twelve people since July. They are Daniel Lee, Wesley Purkey, Dustin Honken, Lezmond Mitchell, Keith Nelson, William LeCroy Jr., Christopher Vialva, Orlando Hall, Brandon Bernard, Alfred Bourgeois, Lisa Montgomery, and, just last night, Corey Johnson. Today, Dustin Higgs will become the thirteenth. To put that in historical context, the Federal Government will have executed more than three times as many people in the last six months than it had in the previous six decades.

Sotomayor: “This is not justice.”

This is not justice. After waiting almost two decades to resume federal executions, the Government should have proceeded with some measure of restraint to ensure it did so lawfully. When it did not, this Court should have. It has not. Because the Court continues this pattern today, I dissent.

Tonight’s rush to execute is galling but not surprising. The selectively pro-life conservative majority has an appetite for capital punishment. That goes for the comparatively-moderate-on-some-other-issues Chief Justice, as I wrote @Slate
