A couple of articles in today's Toronto Star has prompted me to address them. They are mentioning the misconduct of the Conservative Party, but not in the way that they should. The following are just excerpts of the full article, but you can google the full story if interested.

Erin O'Toole has an odd way of distancing himself from Donald Trump

There is no doubt that the federal Liberals appear to be seizing on the attack at the Capitol as a moment to draw a direct link between Canada's Conservatives and America's Trumpists. The party recently sent out a fundraising letter to supporters accusing O'Toole's team of parroting Trump's messaging and engaging with fringe far-right media. Add to the fundraising email recent tweets written by various Liberal MPs implying the same connection.

But just as there is no doubt that the Liberals are seizing on this moment, there is no doubt that they will continue to seize on it long after the moment has passed. Canadian voters are going to be hearing about "Erin O'Trump" for a long time. And Erin O'Toole and his peers would be wise to stop bemoaning this fact and confront it head on.

For example, it's commendable that O'Toole recently tweeted his support of measures to label white supremacist groups as terrorist organizations — but when he turns around and appears hesitant to condemn the MAGA hat (itself a token of white supremacy) and the person wearing it — it's hard to determine where he truly stands.

But he'd better find his footing and find it fast. Because Trumpism is not only a clear and present threat to democracy, it is a clear and present threat to conservative politicians who want to get elected in a democracy.

The news sources are playing it as "it's just politics between rival parties", but we all know that the right-wing movement has nothing to do with politics. It's all fake drama, lies, blatant misinterpretations of anything the Liberals put forth.

The Conservative Party is sabotaging our federal government (the federal & the provincial conservative premiers are in cahoots). They are doing this in order to get Erin O'Toole into the PM position so that he can continue the destruction of Canada that Stephen Harper started.

The intention was to get conservatives in at the provincial level, in order to rip up our Charter, destroy confederation, and line us up with other destructive countries that run an authoritarian government.

The news sources are not addressing the misconduct by the right-wing party on their FaceBook pages or their Twitter accounts. They aren't letting CDNs know what the right-wing intentions are. None mention that they have caused risings of the "Yellow Vests", The O&G Convoys,

The Anti-Maskers, etc.. In fact, when Andrew Scheer and Jason Kenney attempted to cause radicals to rise against First Nation blockades, no news sources mentioned that the right-wing party was inciting violence.

The news sources don't call out the blatant misinformation that the right-wing party posts on their social media. They never mention the misconduct of Senators Batters and Frum on their social media pages.
