Twitter Thread by Peter Gilheany

Peter Gilheany
@petergilheany

#RightNow for every singel one of us charities are either directly helping us or helping people or causes we care about 1/11

#RightNow there will be people living on your street who rely on charitable support 2/11

#RightNow you might be heading out to a green space, almost certainly cared for by volunteers and charities 3/11

#RightNow there are charity shops shuttered on your local high street, leaving charities without a key source of income 4/11

#RightNow you'll probably know someone close who has received a vaccination, guided through the process by a volunteer 5/11

#RightNow the rights many of us take for granted have been fought for and continue to be protected by charities 6/11

#RightNow people who are suffering the most in this pandemic will have charities advocating for them and striving to get them the support they need 7/11

#RightNow countless campaigns are being fought, services are being provided, communities are being championed, little known causes are being supported - all by charities 8/11

But #RightNow the money is running out for many and they're having to make impossible choices about cutting or closing services poeple rely on 9/11

Gov provided a very welcome £750m extra support to charities last year. It's a lot of money, but much less than the estimated £10bn funding gap charities are facing #RightNow 10/11

So, @RishiSunak and @BorisJohnson - support charities are you'll make a difference for every one of our communities - create an Emergency Support Fund #RightNow 11/11