WoLF submitted an excellent brief defending women's rights under Title IX■■:

"Plaintiffs ask the Court to proclaim that women & girls are no longer a discrete category worthy of civil rights protection, but men and boys who claim to have a female 'gender identity' they are"

2.

If the Court rules in their favor, it will mark a truly fundamental shift in American law and policy that strips women of their Constitutional right to privacy, threatens their physical safety, undercuts the means by which women can achieve educational equality, and 3.

[...] ultimately works to erase women and girls under the law. It would not only revoke the very rights and protections that specifically secure women's access to school athletics, but would do so in order to extend those rights and protections to men claiming to be women."

4.

"Women and girls are thus protected under the law from subjective beliefs about whether and how women should work, vote, have children or not have children, and how they ought to look and behave.

5. U.S. civil rights law recognizes the need to protect people from the subjective beliefs of others, including subjective beliefs founded on sex- stereotypes. ...In stark contrast, being 'transgender' depends on the continued existence of sex-stereotypes."

6.

"Plaintiffs contend that doctors essentially 'prescribe' the legal remedy they seek: that transgender-identifying males must be permitted to play on girl's and women's sports teams as part of the treatment for gender dysphoria.

7.

The district court’s preliminary injunction order went along with that approach, placing on women and girls the burden of giving up athletic and education opportunities supposedly to ‘treat’ male students’ mental health needs.

8.

The district court did not and cannot identify any legal authority for conscripting women’s athletic programs to provide mental health treatment for males."
