Twitter Thread by Kyle Prinsloo

Kyle Prinsloo
@study_web_dev

Here are all the businesses I've tried:

(Half of them failed)

■

Training Spectrum

A website showcasing local sports talent, health and fitness articles and interviews with personal trainers.

Started at 17. Lasted 4-5 months.

Food & Drink

A local website listing restaurants in each city (before Zomato was a thing).

Started at 18. Lasted 6-7 months.

Ambitionaire

An online magazine interviewing entrepreneurs for aspiring entrepreneurs.

Started at 18. Lasted 3 months.

10 Question Poll

A website asking 10 random funny questions and you share your results with friends.

Started at 22. Lasted 3 months.

Rank & Rent

Rank niched websites on Google and sell the leads or the website to businesses.

Started at 23. Some have worked pretty well, others have not.

Web Design & Marketing Agency

2 niched agencies and 1 general agency helping clients grow their business.

Started at 23. Slow start, but doing very well now.

Study Web Development

A website where I share what I know to help people get into web development and freelancing.

Started at 23. Slow start, but doing very well now.

Drop Shipping

2x drop shopping businesses.

Bought into 1 at 26. Started another at 26.

Both are doing well.

As you can tell, my journey has been a slow one filled mostly with failure and frustration.

I hope this motivates you to keep going ■