Materials I studied for hundreds of hours before I became consistently profitable as a day trader - a thread:

- 1) Understand how supply and demand zones work (applicable to all timeframes) <https://t.co/aIDm7JbqxL>
- 2) Learn how to identify the pivot points to identify high probability entry and exit zones <https://t.co/EOV8S0qzNi>
- 2.5) Watch one more video to really nail in how to draw supply and demand zones <https://t.co/XhKNOcmWJ2>
- 3) Understand how supply and demand zones work with major support and resistance levels (yes, they are slightly different) <https://t.co/AX1utJnkEW>
- 4) Review a written summary guide to further enhance understanding (and see it as an image rather than a video in action) <https://t.co/ia6BV4Y2qI>
- 5) Review any of @maplestax annotated charts, @RHODESA twitch streams, and @RocketCatchnBob twitch streams
- 6) Review charts of trades you either did or didn't make during the day and draw out where you think supply and demand zones are. See if they would have been profitable or not.
- 7) Last, respect the stop loss at the bottom of your zones and TRUST YOUR CHARTING. Have conviction.
- 8) Okay this is the last thing, tape this to your body and at all times RESPECT RISK MANAGEMENT.
- 9) Read this article (my small cap bible), understand the concepts, and then implement said concepts into EVERY SINGLE TRADE.
