1/ If you've felt like stock market has been disconnected from reality for the past few days, you're not alone

this is the story of the magic bubble created by amatuer traders that broke a multibillion dollar hedge fund

2/ To understand the market right now is to understand r/WallStreetBets

it's a 2.3 million person subreddit dedicated to memes and YOLO Tesla calls that relishes in the massive swings that come with risky trades

aka heaven for the hyperactive amateur trader

3/ The other main character in this saga is GameStop

it's a mall-based retailer that is saddled with debt ($450 million as of Q4 2020) and falling sales (down 40% in last 2 years)

essentially, it's the Blockbuster of video games waiting to be eaten by a Netflix

4/ So hedge funds have been shorting it the pros on Wall Street saw a failing business and took positions where they would profit if the stock falls in fact, it's the single most shorted stock in the entire Stock and S&P 500

The most shorted names in the stock market

Stocks in the S&P 1500 with the highest percentage of float shares sold short

5/ One hedge fund in particular called Melvin Capital held a $55 million short position against GameStop

Melvin also held large short positions against National Beverage, iRobot, and Bed Bath & Beyond

big mistake

Melvin's most recent filing showed that it held 5.4 million puts on GameStop, valued at more than $55 million — an increase of 58 percent during the third quarter.

6/ Soon after the market opened yesterday, look what happened

GameStop: +64%
iRobot: +42%
Nat. Beverage: +26%
Bed, Bath & Beyond: +19%

Melvin got absolutely obliterated

7/ Who's behind these ridiculous swings?

r/WallStreetBets

they had seen Melvin's shorts and mobilized en masse to blow them up and yes, it's possible for the little guy to take on a multi-billion dollar hedge fund right now

Retail traders make up nearly 25% of the stock market following COVID-driven volatility, Citadel Securities says

8/ Melvin got caught in a short squeeze as traders piled into GameStop, Melvin was forced to buy shares to cut some of its losses...which only drove the price higher and remember, GameStop is a failing business this was just r/WallStreetBets flexing on "the establishment"

What Is a Short Squeeze?

A short squeeze occurs when a stock or other asset jumps sharply higher, forcing traders who had bet that its price would fall, to buy it in order to forestall even greater losses. Their scramble to buy only adds to the upward pressure on the stock's price.

9/ And poor Melvin?

after averaging a 30% yearly return since it was founded in 2014, its DOWN 30% to start the year it had to take in $2.75 billion in outside funding to stay afloat

10/ GameStop's crippled one hedge fund, but ain't done yet earlier today, billionaire investor @chamath bought $115 call options meaning he thinks the stock will keep on rising

despite his slightly tongue and cheek bullishness, the stock is skyrocketing once more today

11/ It's been a wild few days, completely detached from reality

but if GameStop teaches us one thing

it's that technology has leveled the playing field

the little guy can now mobilize online and go to-to-toe—and win—against the heaviest hitters on Wall Street
