Travis Scott eerily watches on (could he not see?) as unconscious fan is carried out in front of him at Astroworld festival in Houston. The concert continued.

Fans desperately yelled to Travis Scott to stop the show. There's an ambulance in the crowd and people were dead. The concert continued.

"Y'all weren't in there...motherfucking dying...save someone's life! That's somebody's kid."—A man desperately tries to get help for someone dying in the Travis Scott/Astroworld Houston crowd and is ignored by staff and yelled at by fans—one calls him a "bitch."

.@AppleMusic tweeted *after* the deaths at Travis Scott/Astroworld, "see ya on the other side. @trvisXX went big for H-Town." This was likely a highly unfortunate pre-scheduled tweet, but is rightly raising eyebrows.

If anyone watched Travis Scott's 2019s doc on Netflix 'Look Mom I Can Fly' (2019), then you know that people trampling each other and going crazy was always encouraged and literally right at the beginning of the documentary he got arrested for inciting a riot at his show.

This video is a combination of 2, filmed by @Antoeknee407 at Travis Scott/Astroworld, posted on IG. The 2 clips clearly show the swift change in mood of the crowd—from excitement to chaos, from happiness to struggle and screams for help. His account is striking.

@Antoeknee407 "I saw two people pass away, multiple people pass out, and one person with what appeared to be a broken ankle in front of me."—@Antoeknee407 on IG, following his experience at Travis Scott/Astroworld in Houston.

Thank you, @skepticalspice, for pointing me to Antony's important account!
