so essentially the Wingman trade is to attack the same contracts when they are trading a good 50% lower than what they were originally bought at, with the expectation/hope that they will rebound in a massive way?

What is a #Wingman trade? I will use $SEAS as an example..We bought these at $3.00 they dropped to $1.30 before running to $6.00. The bulls never waivered..so the dip buy killed it..I'm not advocating that anyone trade like this but i love tracking it.

$CRM possible wingman trade...these bulls have been trapped for a couple of weeks..contracts dropped to $2.20 and are back to $3.50 area. Investor day on the 23rd had an upgrade to 330 yesterday from Barclays, held well during the turmoil..Lets see if the WINGMAN works here.
