

Twitter Thread by Andrew Copson

Andrew Copson

@andrewcopson

Tomorrow on #HMD2021 we remember victims of the genocidal Nazi regime and of the many acts of other governments in the years since and in today. As it's @Humanists_UK 125th anniversary and a year for humanist history, I also want to think about the Nazis' humanist victims. 1/9

In 1933 the Nazi government banned humanist and other freethinking and secular groups. Hitler boasted he'd won his 'fight against the atheist movement' and 'stamped it out'. That year Hitler made many speeches saying that only Christian organisations could be permitted 2/9

"By its decision to carry out the political and moral cleansing of our public life, the Government is creating and securing the conditions for a really deep and inner religious life. The advantages for the individual which may be derived from compromises with atheistic organizations do not compare in any way with the consequences which are visible in the destruction of our common religious and ethical values. The national Government sees in both Christian denominations the most important factor for the maintenance of our society."

The largest organisation that found itself banned was the Deutscher Freidenkerbund. It had 600,000 members and was founded just 15 years before @Humanists_UK. Its headquarters were confiscated and given to the Protestant churches, who converted it into a Christian mission 3/9

This is Max Sievers, who was the last chair of the Deutscher Freidenkerbund. He was already in exile in Belgium at the time the ban came into effect. He fled to the USA in 1939 but was denied a visa and returned. He was guillotined for treason in Brandenburg Prison in 1943. 4/9

Humanist culture had long been thriving in Germany (even the English word humanism came to us in the 19th century from the German Humanismus) but the attempted annihilation of it as a culture was very successful, as it was across Europe by both Fascism and Marxist-Leninism 5/9

It has taken many years for humanist organisations in Germany to restore themselves to the membership numbers and social recognition they enjoyed in the late nineteenth and early twentieth centuries. 6/9 <https://t.co/bGES2qBnsF>

The same was true of humanist organisations across Europe and, in fact, in the end it proved impossible to re-form the 19th century world union that had held its last world assembly in @ConwayHall in 1938. A new organisation was needed - and that's how @HumanistsInt was born! 7/9

The first resolution of @HumanistsInt when it met in Amsterdam in 1952, was to give unanimous support to the UN's new Universal Declaration of Human Rights. Out of all the horror, a new commitment to human solidarity was born. 8/9

That commitment needs constant restatement, and that's what #HolocaustMemorialDay means to me. It's a time not just to remember the victims of genocide, but to reinvigorate our commitment to universal human rights and dignity. It's a time to #LightTheDarkness 9/9