Twitter Thread by ■■■■■■s ■■■■■■■■■s

■■■■■■s ■■■■■■■■s
@YiannisBab

Greece's new minister of interior, former far-right activist Makis Voridis. Not "allegedly" and without a hint of exaggeration.

His past is wikipedia-level stuff

Voridis was violently anti-Semitic amongst other things

He is closely connected to the French Front Nationale, but in 2017 he tried to distance himself from them. BY CLAIMING THEY ARE ACTUALLY SOCIALISTS

To paraphrase Phillip K. Dick: the Golden Dawn lost, but the Nazis won

It's not even an isolated incident. More from my colleague here https://t.co/lOHGPSVgWC

> So, the new Deputy Minister of Migration, tasked with integration, is someone who once made the distinction between roma and people, and has claimed that the BBC is owned by arms dealers.https://t.co/4Jibba2nhQ
>
> — Yannis-Orestis Papadimitriou (@iopapadimitriou) January 4, 2021

That there are still people calling this administration "liberal" is truly beyond the pale

I wrote about all this here https://t.co/1If095HxBs

This piece by @dpatrikarakos also captures these tendencies very well https://t.co/5NmynknbsJ

This is what @haaretzcom wrote about Makis Voridis back in 2014 https://t.co/D6tgygtq0C

I hope people still following this fucking joke of an account feel a bit of shame